

Human Resources Management

As the human resources of a company are its most valuable asset, it is necessary for all managers to acquire the knowledge background but also the skills and attitudes that will enable them to manage this potential effectively. The aim is to familiarize students with the basic concepts and practices of human resource management and to provide the necessary scientific background in the specific areas of: human resource planning, job analysis, employee selection, human resources training and development, performance evaluation, motivation and internal communication.